“Principled cop shuts down local book-making operation, but feels persecuted by a shady politician as well as officials within his own department.” Does this sound like a description of your favorite episode of “NYPD Blue” or big budget Hollywood movie? In fact this “plot” describes a real life crime drama, which occurred on the mean streets of Renton in fall of 1934.

Win, Place or Show?

Renton in the early thirties was a place where the police were kept very busy solving a wide range of crimes. Besides breaking up illegal bootlegging operations, which were slowly declining with the approaching end of prohibition, typical crimes like burglary and mugging were also dealt with regularly. The public opinion at the time held that private behavior, like drinking and gambling may have been technically illegal, but only to the extent that speeding and jaywalking are illegal; most people did them anyway and resented being punished for it.

By 1934, prohibition had only just been repealed, and many legitimate businesses in downtown Renton augmented their income in the tough depression-era economy by illegal gambling. Backroom card dealers and bookies were considered to be a handy way for some people to increase their meager savings quickly. One such bookmaking operation was based in an unidentified tavern on Main Street, in an area known as the Hansen Corner.

Although it seems odd that people would wager through a bookie when they were so close to a brand-new racetrack where they could lay bets legally, there are some good reasons why this would be so. The average working class Rentonian would not be able to take a day off and go to the track. The racing season was shorter back then, and people often worked longer hours than we do today. The book making operation however, was only a phone call away. Likewise, people who could not be seen going to a racetrack because of their reputation or social status, would be free to gamble to their heart’s content without fear of public dishonor. In any case, the underground bookmaking business at the tavern on Main Street was thriving, and just lucrative enough to draw the attention of the Renton Police Department.

President's Report
By Barb Horton

Happy springtime!

Today, I’m thinking about how much my life will change here in the very near future. I’m nearing the end of a marathon tour of civic duty as your President and in other roles on the Renton Historical Society Board. During the time I been on the Board, we instituted term limits in our Bylaws. Term limits are important insurance for the overall health of the organization. They focus the incumbent on the important task of developing a successor, so that they don’t come in to the role cold. They also ensure that there will be a steady stream of varying talent at the helm. I am at the end of my second two year term as your President. You will be seeing a new face in my chair soon!

My skills lie in the business world. During my presidency, we defined our organization and put it down in writing. We overhauled our Bylaws so that there is a clear definition of roles and responsibilities, clear definition of how we relate to the community and to the City of Renton. As we grew, it became more important for each of us to focus our attention on the tasks that we were assigned to do. It was SO easy for Board members to dive in and do Staff work, and vice versa. We wanted to do the best we could for the organization, even though we were confusing our constituency and ourselves. We are now a very focused organization, with very clear roles and responsibilities.

We have professionalized the Historical Society by doing the hard work of drafting and adopting governance documentation, securing the necessary talent to manage our money, our investments, and our mission and goals.

We now have a structure that attracts bequests. We have consistent financial documentation and a public Annual Report. When people write a non-profit organization into their wills, they want to be sure that the organization will be fiscally responsible with their gift. RHS is attracting bequests, and because of these, we have now have a growing nest egg for a new building.

I worked shoulder to shoulder with many talented people on the Board, in the Committees, and in the City to make this happen. It was no small feat, and a single individual certainly couldn’t have done it. We are an all-volunteer army, and we all give way more time to this cause than we ever thought we would.

I plan to take a break from Board business to allow the next President to set the next direction, however I will remain active on a Committee. I have enjoyed serving the Renton Historical Society for the last 8 years. I’ve grown as much as it has grown. I feel like I’m graduating from college!

Sincerely,

Barbara Horton
President, Renton Historical Society

Raiders of the Lost Bookies

On the night of October 14, the Acting Police Chief, James Chadwick, led a raid on the tavern. Acting on rumors that bookies had been taking bets on horse races inside, Chadwick, Floyd Lawrence the Acting Mayor, and two other unnamed officers made the bust. Upon charging into the back room of the tavern, they surprised several men in possession of paraphernalia linked with bookmaking. Six unidentified men were taken into custody according to reports in the Renton Chronicle. While the ultimate fate of the six alleged bookies remains unclear from available records, the fate of Acting Chief Chadwick is well documented. He was summarily dismissed from the Renton Police Department shortly after the Raid.

Besides being extremely unusual that an Acting Chief of Police would get fired just days after a successful and highly publicized raid, it also seemed fishy to many people that his dismissal coincided with the return of Mayor E.P. Wilson and Police Chief Patrick Hogan, who had been away from town on a hunting trip together when the raid took place. It is fairly certain that the Mayor and the Police Chief had no knowledge prior to leaving on their trip that the raid was going to occur during their absence. This fact led many friends and supporters of the fired officer to wonder whether or not that particular gambling operation had been under some sort of “protection” from either the Mayor, the Police Chief, or both. While it must be stated quite clearly that no evidence was ever publicly reported linking the Chief or the Mayor to the bookies, the mood of many Rentonians was justifiably suspicious.

The newspaper barely mentioned the major change in personnel, giving only the inaccurate and brief statement, “Ernest Isackson, a popular Rentonite, has replaced James Chadwick, who has resigned from the police force.”

Officer Chadwick was so incensed by the whole situation that he took his grievance to the Renton City Council. The council agreed to hold a formal hearing to determine what the actual reason for Chadwick’s dismissal had been. The city quickly began to gear up for a major showdown.

Trial of the Century

While the subsequent hearing before the Renton City Council can hardly be labeled the “Trial of the Century,” it certainly was a big deal by Renton’s standards. Over 100 people crowded into the council chambers on November 14, restlessly waiting to hear the reading of two letters, one read by Mayor Wilson, and the other by Chief Hogan. Both were allegedly written after the firing and before the incident became public knowledge. Foremost in the minds of the spectators that night was how the Mayor and Police Chief would explain this situation, which appeared to be so unfair. The Mayor’s letter to the Chief read,

“My Dear Chief,

It has come to my attention your dismissal of officer Chadwick, and as of yet I have no report upon the reasons for your action. Trusting the same is justified, I would ask a personal submission of said report for my personal file.
Respectfully, E.P. Wilson, Mayor”

In a letter dated November 2, 1934, Chief Hogan had responded to the Mayor’s request, citing eight robberies, which had taken place on nights when Chadwick had been in charge over the last year. Hogan closed the letter by describing Chadwick as a “fine fellow, but not particularly adapted for the stringent exacting duties of a police officer.” He also stated directly that there was nothing political or personal motivating his dismissal.
favor of giving Officer Chadwick a formal letter stating that he had been dismissed because he broke up the off-track betting ring. Five of the seven council members voted in favor of the resolution, with two abstentions. To smooth over some of the negative publicity which this incident brought on City Hall, the council further voted to grant Officer Chadwick one month’s severance pay.\footnote{floyd-lawrence-acting-mayor}

Immediately after the hearing, the Mayor met with reporters from the Renton Chronicle and issued a statement:

"Mr. Chadwick was appointed his job in good faith by me, and I naturally expected him to be a diligent officer. The report of Chief Pat Hogan shows that there were no less than eight burglaries committed during the time that Mr. Chadwick was on duty and in charge of the police shift. Right at the time when Mr. Chadwick and Mr. Lawrence made their sensational raid on the alleged horse-race betting place on Main street, and hauled two Renton boys through the streets to jail, Forrest Todd was mourning the loss of $300 worth of merchandise which thieves had looted from his place, during a night when Mr. Chadwick was supposed to be in entire charge of policing the town. And I submit that both Chief Hogan and myself might well be pardoned if we felt that Officer Chadwick was not sufficiently diligent in the discharge of his duty, and that change in personnel of the police department would be for the good of the service."

Despite the Mayor’s obviously sarcastic tone, and his belief that Chadwick deserved to be fired, the City Council refused to hold Officer Chadwick responsible for allowing the Todd burglary on the night of the raid. They evidently believed that crimes can still occur no matter who is in charge, and that the criticism by the Mayor was unfair. It is also noteworthy to point out that the Mayor’s allusion to “Renton boys” being “hauled through the streets” seems a bit over sympathetic for someone who allegedly had no personal ties to the “boys” in question, caught red-handed in criminal activities.

The Aftermath

Some interesting events took place, which help shed light on the whole incident, and the feelings of the citizens of Renton toward the people involved. Mayor Wilson served one term of two years as Mayor of Renton. It was very much the pattern for Mayors during this time to serve two consecutive terms, almost as a foregone conclusion. In 1937, he attempted to run for Mayor again, but was soundly defeated. Interestingly, the man who Wilson gave Chadwick’s job to, Ernest Isackson, was reportedly the campaign manager for Wilson’s abortive comeback attempt. According to the Renton Chronicle, Wilson didn’t really want to get back into politics, but was persuaded by “hundreds” of letters from supporters, asking him to run.\footnote{The-Renton-Chronicle-September-25-1941-pg-1}

It is impossible to know how much the memory of the Chadwick incident caused Mayor Wilson’s plans for a second term to fall short. Soon thereafter, he left politics to concentrate on his career in banking full time. Many people who supported Officer Chadwick’s conspiracy theory felt at least partially vindicated, when former Mayor Wilson was convicted of embezzling a quarter of a million dollars from his own bank in 1941 and sentenced to a term of 10 years at the Federal Penitentiary on McNeil Island.\footnote{The-Renton-Chronicle-December-1937-pg-1}

These subsequent events seem to make Officer Chadwick’s claims of corruption all the more believable. When a new city administration took over in June of 1935, Police Chief Pat Hogan was replaced. The newly elected Mayor, O. N. Cochran, appointed Vince Stewart to be Chief of Police for Renton. Stewart had been police chief for many years prior to the Wilson administration, and had served under several Mayors. Bringing back this popular leader went a long way in helping to restore citizen’s trust in their Mayor and Police Department. Stewart ended up serving for several more years as Renton’s Top Cop.\footnote{The-Renton-Chronicle-September-25-1941-pg-1}

To the surprise of no one, James Chadwick was re-instated as a Renton police officer on June 5, 1935 by Mayor Cochran, and served with distinction for twenty-five more years until his retirement in December 1960.\footnote{The-Great-Gambling-Raid-pg-3}
Volunteer Corner
by Dorota Rahn, Volunteer Coordinator

I am back in the museum after three months of being physically away and mentally far away. One exception was the holiday party for volunteers and members of the Renton Historical Museum and Society at Carco Theater in December. It was my idea but nothing would have happened if not for the hard work of the volunteer committee. Del George, Ila Hemm, Sarah Jane Hisey, and Shirley Phinney, and Bea Mathewson did an excellent job preparing food and decorations. Naomi Mathisen gave away tickets for door prizes. Thanks to them I could relax and concentrate on delivering twin girls, Sylvia and Charlotte, and on changing diapers and breast feeding day and night.

My new daughters are obviously pretty and cute when they cry, poop and pee. My husband calls one “dumb” and the other “fat”. Not to offend anybody, the first cries a lot and the second gains weight much faster than the first. Natalie, the older sister, desperately tries to fit in the picture. By the way, all well wishers were wrong. She is not helping to change diapers. However, she passionately sticks pacifiers in her sisters’ mouths while they are crying. She jumps up and down very loudly pretending she doesn’t remember there are some small creatures soundly sleeping in the room. She complains about lack of our attention and plays it nicely to get what she wants. So much for a little helper.

The real helper is my mother, who came from Poland. It doesn’t matter that she tells me I am starving the babies by not feeding them every time they start crying, and that I am not crying together with them. She is at home all the time so I can come back to the museum, go grocery shopping and to the fitness club in a desperate effort to shed some of the pounds I put on. However, I didn’t loose even one pound in contrast to stories about painlessly losing weight while breastfeeding. Not me!

On the bright side, I am back in the museum working with people I really admire and hope my work will add to the museum’s value.

In Memorium

DEL GEORGE 1937-2004

We just learned that the museum volunteer, Del George, passed away on March 4th. He was born on March 31, 1937. Lately he was a president of the Renton office of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, coordinator for the American Association of Retired People, and treasurer of the Unitarian Church among others.

Del became a museum volunteer in July of last year and had already managed to positively impact our work. As a former chef he prepared all the delicious hors d’ouvrés for our Holiday Party and had planned on becoming a docent and Board member. We lost a very devoted and hard working person with a great sense of humor.

Volunteer Hours for 2003

Sixty-three volunteers completed 2550 hours of service at the museum in 2003. Volunteers in our museum do a variety of tasks: some put information about collections in our database. Others greet visitors on Saturdays as well as do research, build exhibits, do accounting, guide tours, organize and prepare museum events and help during Renton River Days, just to mention the most common activities. The museum wouldn’t exist without volunteer support. The museum staff and the Renton Historical Society Board take this opportunity to thank volunteers for their unprecedented involvement.
The 2003 Holiday Party

The Board of Trustees of the Renton Historical Society and staff of the Renton Historical Museum invited members of the society and the museum volunteers for the Holiday Party at Carco Theater on December 9th of last year. Both parties wanted to show appreciation for everybody who supports the museum and the society. The Volunteer Committee did a great job of planning and preparing the party for an unexpected number of 150 guests. It was a very encouraging number and we hope to make the event a tradition.

Guests gathered in the lobby of Carco Theater for some delicious hors d’oeuvres prepared by Del George, a new volunteer, with a great help of the Volunteer Committee members, Ila Hemm, Sarah Jane Hisey, Shirley Phinney, and Bea Mathewson. The ladies created a holiday atmosphere with some Christmas decorations. Additionally, they helped to clean up after the party.

There were some exciting moments before the party ended. Some guests had an opportunity to meet people they didn’t see for a long time. Others had a chance to get acquainted with new ones. There was a lottery for door prizes donated among others by Charles Schwab, Del George, and Uptown Glassworks.

Thank you everybody for coming and enjoying the time. In general it was a great event and the Board of Trustees and the museum staff hopes you will join us at the annual picnic in June.
Renton Museum Report
By Steve A. Anderson, Museum Supervisor

Now, I know what you’ve been thinking: “Gee, hasn’t it been a long time since I’ve heard anything from the Museum or Society?” Well, take comfort in the fact that yes indeed, it has been awhile, and there are good reasons for the delayed mailing of this RHQuarterly.

First off, we’ve been busy wrapping up year-end activities and getting several new initiatives off the ground. Secondly, we’ve moved the publishing dates of this quarterly back one month in an attempt to avoid conflicts with other publications being produced within the city. Further, it allows us to move the publishing dates away from busy periods of the Museum’s life, and into more reasonable time frames for reporting on activities within the organization. Also, we can capitalize on the graphic material available to support several holidays that we have not been able to use previously, such as St. Patrick’s Day! The new publishing dates will be the 15th of March, June, September and December.

Thirdly, we’ve been imposing a higher level of “intellectual control” on the collections of objects and images we possess here at the museum – but more on that later.

In terms of our mailing schedule, membership renewals and year-end fund-drive mailings will continue to be sent separately from the RHQuarterly as the membership has expressed an appreciation for that method . . . and how! This past year-end combined membership renewal/fund drive netted a grand total of $9,508, with membership dues pulling in $4,737, endowment contributions equaling $1,670, general fund giving $2,593 and capital projects fund raising $508. All this will go towards preserving and presenting Renton’s heritage during the year and for years to come! Thank you all for your most generous contributions to these activities within the Museum and Society.

I mentioned that we’ve been busy. I guess “busy” is not exactly the way to describe all of what’s been happening as our Volunteer Coordinator Dorota Rahn took maternity leave in late November to have twins, Sylvia and Charlotte – who arrived in early December, 2003. Dorota has just returned to semi-active duty at the Museum in late February, but I’m sure her home life has changed dramatically. Shortly before that, the Museum’s administrative assistant Daisy Ward fell at home and broke her leg, which required a hospital stay, intensive therapy and much home rest. Daisy has just returned to the Museum within the last month, working a limited schedule until her strength returns. To pick up the slack, we obtained the help of Amy Neff (pictured above) who is employed at the Main Library and is currently working towards her Library Sciences degree. Amy, who handled the process-are located and their context to other pieces in the collection. As you might have guessed, “intellectual control” is something that is gained over a long period of time, unless a system for sharing that knowledge is developed. We have been using Past Perfect software for about three years now, but only within the last six months have we really begun to “dig in” and (prompted by the Custer Estate donation) explore the full length and breadth of the holdings of the institution. What we’ve found is surprising and astounding us: multiple systems of cataloguing; incomplete records; considerable duplication and a large number of uncatalogued objects. However, we’ve also discovered what must be declared as some of our most important holdings, massive collections currently unknown to even our most senior members and a variety of wonderful, distinctly “Renton” objects that can and will now be utilized in our mission and cared for properly. The process involved in getting this material in an accessible format is not something that will happen this year. Perhaps, not even within the next three years. However, in beginning work on our historical materials now, we are establishing a beachhead on the collection and with each new entry into the Past Perfect system, our combined “intellectual control” of the collection grows. This will be a type of control that is shared amongst the entire staff — not just one or two individuals — and which can be easily learned. This is important if the Museum is to grow into an institution that answers to the demands of current and future generations of Rentonians.

We would like to invite anyone interested in helping with this cataloging project to contact the Museum. Numerous volunteers have already spent hundreds of hours entering data and we’re already beginning to reap the benefit of their efforts. It has been a busy winter, but I feel very satisfied in the work that has progressed thus far and see no roadblocks to further progress in the near future.

Until next time,

Steve Anderson, Museum Supervisor

By Laura Crawford, Curator/Collections Manager

While I’ve had the pleasure of meeting many of the dedicated volunteers and members who support the Museum’s efforts through their activities and other contributions, I would like to take this opportunity via the newsletter to share some of my own background and aspirations with those of you whom I have yet to meet.

I’m a relative newcomer to the Pacific Northwest - at least by Renton terms. While I have lived in different parts of the country for professional or educational purposes, this is the place I truly call home. Upon completing my undergraduate degree in anthropology from the University of Arizona in the 1980’s, I moved ‘back east’ and was employed for several years at a banking and investment firm in Boston, Massachusetts. A career in the museum field continued to appeal to me, and I gained entrance into the Museum Studies program at the Harvard Extension School. Just shy of completing that program, I relocated to the Seattle area in 1995 and continued employment as an accountant at a major Seattle broadcasting company until 2001. Still determined to complete a formal program in museum studies, I enrolled in the Certificate Program at the University of Washington, which I completed last year while volunteering at the Museum in 2002. Following successful completion of the University of Washington program, I was accepted into a Master’s Degree program in Museum Studies via distance learning, which I will complete in 2005.

I continue to be employed for a few hours per week as an accountant at a Renton-based technology company while spending some very happy and busy afternoons working as the Museum’s Collection Manager. While I have lived in the Renton area since 1995, last summer my husband and I officially became residents following our purchase of a small home in the Renton Highlands where we hope to spend many happy years. Aside from a truly wonderful commute, I realize that not only working - but especially living - in Renton gives me additional insights into not only its history, but also its future. I consider myself truly fortunate to share in this.

Collections Area Highlights

2004 marks the beginning of a new year and a new focus: collections management activities will be geared toward making the best possible use of existing materials and resources while identifying areas where an investment will be required to safeguard Museum staff, volunteers and collections. By addressing current and future needs we will then be better enabled to develop and implement community programs and exhibits that will increase the Museum’s visibility - and sustainability - in the community.

The Collections Area has had the assistance of several very helpful and dedicated volunteers over the past few months. Special mention should go to Arthur Allen (pictured at right), who has been scanning the Museum’s photographic collection over the past several months and has successfully created a digital record of over 2,300 photographs to date!

These images, made available on Past Perfect, the Museum’s Collections Management database, will prove invaluable to Museum staff and researchers.

To date, over 870 images from the Charles L. Custer Estate have been catalogued and scanned into the Museum’s database. A recent inspection of the storage area housing the remainder of the artifacts yielded additional images, and while many of these are duplicates of those already catalogued, those remaining provided valuable information on several of George W. Custer’s construction activities, including construction at Kerriston and Barneston. A number of wonderful cabinet photographs were also discovered (such as the image above) which will be retained in the Museum’s collections pending further research and identification.

The Collections Management staff has been hard at work over the past several weeks examining the contents of the high density storage area to determine what improvements can be made to more efficiently protect and store the many artifacts and archival materials the Museum is entrusted to care for. Over the coming months, we will continue to assess our holdings and future needs. Anyone interested in working with the Museum’s photographic collection (scanning, data entry) or light sewing of dust covers or hangers for clothing in storage - please give us a call!
George W. & Annie Lewis Custer Endowment Program Report

The Endowment Committee met on the 27th of January 2004 with the Chair, Ken Becker presiding and committee members Naomi Mathisen and Steve Anderson attending. The fund’s total is currently $1,267,592 (December 31st numbers), with 39% residing in fixed income investments and 61% invested in equities – this follows the distribution of the money from the Charles Lewis Custer Estate in equity investment to establish a preferred equity/fixed investment ratio. Discussion involved the annual transfer of interest to the Society’s general fund and fund allocations. At the current levels of investment, it was determined that approximately $15,000 in earned interest income will be available for transfer to the Society’s general fund to offset expenses at year’s end.

There remains several vacancies on the committee, so Chairman Becker requested that the committee members provide names of any individuals that might be interested in serving; all candidates will be considered by the Board. Any Society member who has an interest and time to spend on this aspect of the Society’s business is urged to contact Steve Anderson at the Museum (425.255.2330). As there were no other investment decisions to be made, the meeting adjourned. The committee meets quarterly, with the next meeting on April 28, 2004.

News has recently come to the Museum that the estate of Clinton Betz includes a large cash memorial bequest to the Society. Please know that all memorials, life membership dues and directed gifts go toward the endowment fund’s working capital. All gifts are tax deductible as allowed by law. Consult your tax advisor. Only the interest generated by these invested funds will be used as sustained support to the Renton Historical Society. Please call 425.255-2330 for more information, or email at saanderson@ci.renton.wa.us for more information regarding including the Renton Historical Society in your living will or bequest.

This pioneer of Renton passed away on January 30th at the age of 93. Clinton was born in Renton in 1910 to Edward and Louise Betz. He graduated from Renton High School in 1929, and because of the depression, was unable to pursue higher education and thus joined his father Edward in the florist and greenhouse business already established in Renton.

True to his roots, Clinton opened a florist shop in downtown Renton in 1947 which he operated for 26 years. Many local florists began their career in his shop.

This pioneer gentleman had a lifelong interest in the maritime field, photographing ships along the Pacific Coast. Much of his work in this field is a permanent part of a collection at the Museum of History and Industry in Seattle.
Memorials shown were received from those noted in reduced print from November 2003 to February 20, 2004.

Dr. Thomas, former president of Battelle Memorial Institute in Columbus, Ohio, died at the age of 100 on February 15, 2004.

Bertram Thomas was born in Renton, WA in 1903. He was self supporting from the age of 12 selling newspapers, the Saturday Evening Post and then working in a local drug store. Graduating from high school at the age of 16, he was employed as a bookkeeper at the Pacific Car and Foundry in Renton. Dr. Thomas received his B.S. degree in chemistry from the University of Washington in 1928 with a major in chemistry, mathematics, and physics, and a Ph.D in chemistry in 1933. He pioneered work on the chemistry of sea water.

Dr. Thomas joined the research staff of Battelle in 1934 and established the Institute's Division of Chemical Research in 1939, was named assistant director in 1940 and became acting director in 1942. He was president of Battelle from 1957 until he retired in 1968.

Dr. Thomas was a member of the boards of trustees of Ohio State University and of Case Western Reserve University, and was awarded honorary degrees by Ohio State, Michigan Technical University, Otterbein College, and Cleveland State University. In 1967 he received the Distinguished Alumnus Award of the University of Washington.

Dr. Thomas also served on the boards of the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts, the Columbus Symphony Orchestra, the Aspen Music Festival and the Music Academy of the West in Santa Barbara, as well as serving as president of the Santa Barbara Botanic Garden. He was skilled at wood carving and spent many of his retirement hours building violins. As a musician he played the violin and the piano.

Ellen (White) Pope

This lovely lady recently passed away in December of 2003. Ellen was born in Renton, Washington in 1916 to pioneer Renton parents, Jobie and Jeannette White.

She was a graduate of Renton High School and also attended the University of Washington as well as the Sherwood School of Music in Chicago. Because of her love of music, she became an accomplished pianist.

Ellen and her husband, W. Stewart Pope, were strong and faithful supporters of the Renton Historical Society and Museum. Sometime ago, this couple graciously contributed a substantial amount to the Society in memory of their parents. This amount has increased in value over the years and we are sincerely appreciative of the generosity shown by Ellen and Stewart.

As coal mine disasters and accidents frequently killed many locals living in King County’s coal mining district, safety was a major issue. In the latter 19th Century/early 20th Century, when this photograph was taken in Black Diamond, the area had just been struck by several of the worst fires, cave ins, and explosions ever. Here, you can see members of the United Mine Workers Union visiting Black Diamond with the “Mine Rescue Car” that was packed with rescue and safety equipment, including the “hard hat” breathing apparatus worn by the two men on the left. This railroad car, and the attendants shown here (including Renton’s Manchester Walters and Martin Jorgensen), visited Franklin, Black Diamond, Newcastle and other area mines to promote mine safety.
